ENGLISH AND CHINESE DICTIONARY

PUNTI AND MANDARIN PRONUNCIATION.

An ENGLISH-CHINESE DICTIONARY, published at the Daily Press Office, Hongkong.

FOR completeness and practical use, this work stands unrivalled. All the words which the Chinese have of late years compelled to coin to express the numerous objects in machinery, photography, telegraphy in science generally, which the rapid advance of foreign relations has imposed upon their language, are here explained and clearly and fully illustrated and explained, forming guides for students of a most instructive kind. Both the Chinese and Punt pronunciations given, the accents being strictly marked, the best principle of phonetic notation. The grammar displays the success of an attempt to make the Chinese and English type correct in the mind of body, thereby effecting a more perfect union of the two languages, and previously attained, and dispensing with vast margins and vacant spaces which heretofore characterized Chinese publications.

To illustrate the vast scope of the work, the following table is submitted for consideration. Chinese Vocabulary contains about 10,000 Chinese characters, and Mellish's English and Chinese Dictionary about 20,000; this work contains more than 50,000 Chinese words, and upwards of 600,000 Chinese characters. Again, despite all the grammatical and other elementary works as yet published, students of this difficult language absolutely require examples to display the various constructions and equivalents of different words have no general meaning. Of these examples this work contains more than five times as many as any other Dictionary hitherto published.

For practical purposes the arrangement of the work is so complete, that a reference to its pages enables a person who is ignorant of Chinese to understand the Chinese with natives who understand nothing but Chinese. In this respect the work will be indispensable to all European residents in China, and to the natives themselves in the various parts of the country. The work is sold of them are perfectly inexperienced parties resident in England and interested
